Almond Ingredients Market size was

USD 10.0 billion in 2022, and is expected to reach a value of USD 25.58 billion in 2032, and register a revenue CAGR of 11% during the forecast period. Due to the increased demand for almond-based goods in a variety of applications, including bakery, confectionery, snacks, and drinks due to their nutritional and health benefits, the market revenue growth is primarily driven by these factors. The demand for almond ingredients in the food sector is being driven by the acceptance of plant-based foods and the rising popularity of clean label and natural ingredients.

The demand for products made with almonds is also being helped by increased consumer knowledge of the health advantages of almonds, such as their abundance in protein, fiber, vitamins, and minerals. The market for almond components is expanding as a result of the rising demand for vegan and gluten-free food items. Since almonds are inherently gluten-free, they can be used in baking and other food preparation processes instead of wheat flour, which is why the food industry now has a greater need for almond milk and flour.
