

Altenex Energy to host June 13 in Stuttgart — Auto Industry Symposium: Trends in Sustainability

BMW's sustainability lead to join partners M2030 and Suppliers Partnership for the Environment, presenting strategies for decarbonization of automotive sector

STUTT GART, GERMANY, June 1, 2023 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Altenex Energy will host an all-day symposium on Tuesday, June 13, in Stuttgart on the challenges and opportunities of decarbonizing the automobile industry. The event is open to sector professionals and the media under Chatham House rules, with networking opportunities over lunch and a closing cocktail hour.

Speakers will address both original equipment manufacturer (OEM) and supplier points of view, in the context of the European energy and renewables markets.

Altenex Auto Industry Symposium: Trends in Sustainability

Niels Angel, Project Leader for Sustainability at BMW Group, will lead a panel discussion around the Catena-X platform and the transition to a product-centric view of carbon in automotive supply chains.

Event partner M2030 will join the conversation with industry experts and peers on best practices and key auto industry sustainability initiatives. Topics will include:

- Decarbonization requests coming from manufacturers to their suppliers
- Supplier engagement to date, and supply chain trends and dynamics

- The impact of European energy forecasts, and regulatory updates
- Renewable energy sourcing through corporate PPAs in Germany and elsewhere

- Available hedging strategies and control mechanisms
- Decarbonization and sustainability life cycle assessments

The symposium will include lunch and the opportunity to network over drinks at the end of the day. Energy and sustainability professionals involved with the procurement process are welcome to request an invitation.
