Gene Therapy for Rare Disease Market

Most gene treatments have recently been designated as orphan drugs. In general, orphan drugs are classified as pharmaceuticals with one or more approved indications under the Orphan Drug Act of 1983. The Orphan Drug Act encourages the creation of cutting-edge therapies for people with rare diseases. The Orphan Drug Act, which established the orphan drug classification, accelerated the discovery and licencing of medications for rare diseases, and the years 2017 and 2018 saw the largest number of orphan drug and indication approvals ever. Gene therapies cost a lot to produce because they require sophisticated technology, expensive research and development, and highly qualified scientists and researchers.
