

DART Promotes National Safety Month

The National Safety Council established June as National Safety Month. During June, DART will focus on the prevention of workplace violence.

BOULDER, COLORADO, UNITED STATES, June 1, 2023 /EINPresswire.com/ -- The National Safety Council established June as National Safety Month, aiming to increase awareness of the leading safety and health risks at home and at work and everywhere in between. DART's celebration of National Safety Month focuses on the prevention of workplace violence.

DART celebrates National Safety Month

Workplace violence affects all industries; no workplace is immune. Some 2 million American workers are victims of workplace violence each year. This includes both verbal and physical attacks. In 2020, physical assaults resulted in 20,050 injuries and 392 fatalities, according to Injury Facts®.

People have the right to live free of violence.”

Certain industries, including healthcare, service providers and education, are more prone to violence than others. For example, the Bureau of Labor Statistics reported that injuries to healthcare workers by another person more than doubled from 4,010 in 2011 to 8,590 in 2020.

Every Organization Needs to Address Workplace Violence

The National Safety Council recommends that managers and safety professionals at every workplace should develop a policy on violence that includes:

- Employee training and creating an emergency action plan
- Conducting mock training exercises with local law enforcement
- Adopting a zero-tolerance policy toward workplace violence

While technologies (e.g., weapon detection systems, panic buttons, cameras) can help organizations prevent and mitigate incidents of violence, the best tool to use is an educated staff who knows how to effectively respond to these situations. Having staff members who are trained in verbal de-escalation techniques is key to preventing a verbally escalating situation from becoming physical.

DART recently developed a free online survey that helps organizations evaluate the safety of their workplace environment and effectiveness of their safety policies. After completing the survey, respondents can download a PDF of their completed survey and share it with their co-workers and/or employer.

Violence Prevention Begins with Education

DART, a Colorado nonprofit, provides educational resources and violence prevention training for professionals, to help them maintain a safe work environment.

DART identifies 4 critical topic areas for a violence prevention program:

1. Establish a Workplace Safety System that includes Management Support, Workplace Safety Analysis, Training and Education, and a Post-incident Response Process.
2. Instruction on de-escalation techniques.
3. Instruction on situational awareness skills.
4. Instruction on personal safety techniques with a focus on escapes, restraints, and team intervention skills.

“Violence prevention training is essential to maintaining a safe work environment and increasing employee retention”, said Michele Dusenbery, Executive Director of DART. “When all employees recognize the warning signs of an escalating situation and know how to properly respond, the response can be effective in bringing the situation back under control. Providing verbal de-escalation training to employees also demonstrates management support and can be an important component of a Workplace Safety System.”

During National Safety Month, DART is offering discounts on its online Verbal De-escalation Training. For more information about DART's Violence Prevention trainings and resources, click here.
