VOLUNTEERS BEAUTIFIED RUTGERS
GARDENS FOR A BETTER GREEN EARTH

ASEZ WAO volunteers dedicated their time to maintain and beautify Rutgers University Rain Garden in New Brunswick, NJ as part of their Green

Earth initiative that's fulfilled through environmental cleanups. On Wednesday, May 31, 2023, ASEZ WAO members partnered with Coordinated Family Care (CFC) to beautify Rutgers to make the university more captivating for visitors, residents, university students and staff members. This initiative will help minimize polluted storm water runoffs as well as any potential flooding.

ASEZ WAO and CFC volunteers worked diligently to restore Rutgers Rain Garden by removing invasive weed plants such as garlic mustard, mugwort, mile-a-minute, wild pokeweed, Japanese stiltgrass and more. These are all very invasive weeds that take over and choke out the native plants. "The rain garden helps filter rain water through the system and goes back into the greater water shed which helps establish cleaner drinking water for the whole community" says Maxine Marvosa, Assistant Director at Rutgers Gardens. By pulling the weeds before they go to seed, it prevents the seed bank from building up.

"I am surprised to see so many young volunteers here at the Rutgers Gardens who are so excited.... Plants are our life. Without plants you cannot survive" says Rajesh Mehta, Council President from the Township of North Brunswick. By making the rain garden more attractive, the local community can enjoy and appreciate a beautiful site where history comes alive!

Rutgers Gardens Beautification Project- ASEZ WAO-
CFC Volunteers

As a result, the beautification project at Rutgers University Rain Garden added a layer of charm to the community thanks to ASEZ WAO volunteers and Coordinated Family Care (CFC). ASEZ WAO continues to make effort to clean up polluted streets, parks, downtown areas, and mountains and reduce greenhouse gas emissions in daily life. In addition, ASEZ WAO aims to create healthy terrestrial ecosystems by informing the international community of the importance of protecting terrestrial ecosystems. □
