“Take an exciting journey with me into my world of action stunts, adventures, joy, heartbreak, death, and my uncanny desire to overcoming my fears and follow my dreams! I hope to inspire you to live your dream life, too,” Peterson says.

Peterson has been in the stuntwoman business for over 40 years and has many credits. She has worked as a stunt double for some of the biggest names in film and television, including Sharon Stone, Jessica Lange, Faye Dunaway, Diane Keaton, Farrah Fawcett, Michele Pfeiffer, Heather Locklear, and many other actresses. In addition to her work in front of the camera, she served as the former President of the Stuntwomen's Association of Motion Pictures. Peterson is also the first woman to join the East Coast Stuntmen's Association, even after being turned down because of her gender. She was told by the Stuntmen's Association, "Forget it, honey,' we put the wigs on, and we do the stunts," Peterson recalled.

It was not easy for Peterson in the beginning. According to the Malibu Times, she was hurt during her first job with the Stuntmen's Association but did not give up. They convinced her to try a second time. This time she was successful, and "a star was born." In her book, Peterson discusses her trials, tribulations, and unwillingness to stop believing in herself. According to the Malibu Times, Peterson's book provides a fascinating look inside the world of Hollywood stunts and what it takes to succeed as a stunt performer. Peterson shares a universal message of self-determination and perseverance.
