How To Keep Momentum Going On Diversity And Inclusion

Numly™, Inc. at FromDayOne Conference in Austin on June 8th

Numly Announces Participation and Joins HR Leaders' Panel at FromDayOne Conference in Austin, themed "Sharing Innovative Ideas to Rediscover Community Amid Changing Corporate Values"

In addition to its exhibition booth, Numly will be featured in a panel discussion titled “How to Keep Momentum Going on Diversity and Inclusion.” The panel, moderated by Deborah Sengupta Stith, reporter, Austin-American Statesman will include distinguished industry experts and thought leaders, including:

- Madhukar Govindaraju, Founder & CEO, Numly
- Janet Etlinger, Vice President, HRBP Leader, HPE Compute Business Unit, Hewlett Packard Enterprise (HPE)
- Julia Lashay-Israel, Head of Inclusion & Belonging, Keller Williams (KW)
- Mark Pearson, Corporate Vice President, Talent and Organizational Capabilities, AMD
- Susanne DiCocco, Principal, Human Capital, Deloitte US

The panel discussion will provide valuable insights into attributes of Connected Leadership and the core elements of a Connected Leadership Development Program.

“Supportive networks and relationships with Managers, External Coaches, Mentors and Colleagues in the workplace are critical for job satisfaction, career growth, retention, and productivity; and with the dramatic shift to remote work over the past few years, those ties have become even more important. Connected Leadership is the new Management Science for organizations of all sizes. Internal Coaching helps teams scale to deliver phenomenally higher levels of performance, consistently.” – Says Madhukar Govindaraju, CEO – Numly, Inc.

"Since hybrid work is here to stay, employers need to make an investment in equipping leaders with the skills to maintain those vital human connections with their team members. At our Austin conference, we are looking forward to hearing from Numly's CEO, Madhukar Govindaraju, who'll be speaking on an executive panel about how connected leaders can empower their diverse workforce and to grow within their organizations, as well as feel a strong sense of belonging." – Says Stephen Koepp Co-founder at FromDayOne, <https://www.fromdayone.co>.

Numly™, Inc. invites HR Leaders and Innovators to attend FromDayOne's Austin Conference in person on June 08, 2023, and join us at our booth during the conference to get engaged in a discussion on today's workplace engagement and fostering a culture of continuous learning and Inclusivity.
