In 'YES REPEAT NO' three actors audition to play a Palestinian-Jewish actor and activist, Juliano Mer-Khamis, who was assassinated on the steps of the theatre he founded in Jenin. He considered himself a living embodiment of the Palestine-Israel conflict. Though switching between the conflicting identities he inhabited, he was always viewed as an Arab in Israel, and a Jew in Jenin.

During a tense rehearsal meant to determine which of them is most suited to authentically portray Juliano Mer-Khamis, the three Julianos find their sense-of-self fractured and disrupted. Director Michael Moshe Dahan: "I am interested in interrogating questions around identity, the way we attach ourselves to certain social/political markers of identity, and how we perform identity."
