Dianña calls out the people responsible for her hating her many last names

Dianña provided some background about her new song, "I wrote this song while trying to change my own last name that I was not happy with due to the memories of being in an abusive marriage. Then, trying to choose from my previous last names, I realized I didn't want any of those either."

Who's going to pay for my therapy?”

Dianña

Dianña's most recent release, "A Street Called Evergreen", is just coming off a successful run at over three dozen radio stations. Her holiday release "Missing You Underneath the Mistletoe" rose to #14 on the Adult Contemporary Holiday Chart. And her release previous to that "Hands" spent seven weeks on the Adult Contemporary charts inside the top 20, where she was also the #1 independent artist for five of those weeks.

"Girl With No Last Name" was written by Dianña and recorded in Nashville by Grammy nominated producer/mixer Mark Needham (Imagine Dragons, Dolly Parton, Chris Isaak).
