Under the guidance of esteemed leaders in the medical and regulatory fields, the discussions revolved around developing a framework that would facilitate Indian medical students' aspirations to practice medicine in the Philippines. This collaborative effort seeks to establish a streamlined process to integrate qualified Indian graduates into the healthcare system, strengthening the medical workforce and fostering a global exchange of medical knowledge.

The proposal garnered enthusiastic support from representatives of Philippine medical schools, recognizing the potential benefits of fostering academic diversity and cross-cultural learning within their institutions. The active participation of the Professional Regulation Commission (PRC) ensured that any proposed measures align with existing licensure requirements and medical practice standards in the Philippines.

Additionally, the Indian Embassy's active involvement underscored the commitment of both nations to strengthen bilateral ties and create opportunities for Indian students pursuing medical education in the Philippines. Their engagement in the discussions reflects a shared vision of promoting educational collaboration and providing a supportive environment for Indian medical students to flourish.

smooth transition for Indian students pursuing medical education in the Philippines. Their valuable insights enriched the discussions, reinforcing the commitment to academic cooperation and student success.

Located in Cebu City, Philippines, UV Gullas College of Medicine stands out as an attractive choice for Indian students seeking a medical degree. Renowned as the most prestigious medical school in the country, UV Gullas College of Medicine offers an English-taught MBBS (Bachelor of Medicine and Bachelor of Surgery) degree with an American curriculum. Notably, the college offers relatively lower MBBS fees compared to many other medical schools in the USA, UK, Australia, and India.

With a remarkable 50-year history in medical education and research, UV Gullas College of Medicine consistently ranks among the top medical colleges in the Philippines. The MBBS degree offered by UV Gullas College of Medicine is recognized by major medical bodies worldwide, including MCI, WHO, ECFMG, FAIMER, and USMLE, ensuring its global acceptance.

One notable advantage for Indian students is that UV Gullas College of Medicine does not require an entrance exam for MBBS admission. Students only need to achieve a minimum score of 50% in Physics, Chemistry, and Biology, and qualify NEET with 40th percentile. Furthermore, there is no mandatory requirement for IELTS or TOEFL for pursuing MBBS studies at UV Gullas College.

UV Gullas College of Medicine's affordability further adds to its appeal as a preferred choice for aspiring medical students, ensuring that quality medical education is accessible to a broader range of individuals.
