The increasing incidence of dental diseases and tooth loss worldwide is one of the key factors boosting the market for restorative dentistry. The incidence of dental issues is rising, and factors like poor oral hygiene, bad eating patterns, cigarette use, and ageing populations all play a role. As a result, there has been a huge increase in demand for restorative dental procedures, which is fueling market expansion.

Some Key Highlights From the Report

Due to undiscovered tooth cavities, the endodontics and conservative segment had the highest revenue share in 2021. According to the 2019 Oral Health Surveillance Report from the Centres for Disease Control and Prevention, 10% of children between the ages of 2 and 5 and 16% of children between the ages of 6 and 8 had untreated oral disease in their primary teeth. As a result, rising oral diseases have a big impact on the segment's revenue growth.

A substantial portion of revenue in 2021 came from the implants category as a result of growing technical improvements. For instance, the Dentsply Sirona Implants company debuted the self-tapping implant, branded as the "DS PrimeTaper," on September 25, 2021. Due to its double thread, it offers long-term bone stability and is simple to install. Workflow is supported by a simple drilling process that uses a limited number of drills.

In North America, the market for restorative dentistry accounted for a sizably high revenue share in 2021 as a result of the expansion of dental product government approvals. For instance, the Nobel Biocare N1™ implant system comprising specialised equipment, prosthetic components, and surgical protocols received FDA approval on December 27, 2021, in California, according to a statement made by Envista Holdings Corporation ('Envista').
