that Caryn Ladd, Director of Strategic Partnership Sales, was selected as a winner of its 2023 Moxie Awards. The annual awards program recognizes women in tech who have made outsized contributions — skills, leadership and accomplishments — to their workplaces, communities and the industry as a whole.

“Caryn is a difference maker, with our partners and the tech industry as a whole.” says Matt Zontini, Head of Strategic Partnerships at Covered. “This award is a testament to her hard work and leadership. It is an honor to work with Caryn every day.”

Built In’s open call for nominations saw more than 800 entries for 2023. An esteemed panel of judges, all senior women leaders in tech, reviewed the nominations and chose 100 women whom they believe showed the most “moxie.” Built In defines moxie as a combination of courage, determination, energy and know-how. Over the course of their careers, these professionals have defined excellence in many ways, from their achievements thus far to their commitment to championing other women.

“Women are making a difference in tech, and Built In is honored to elevate these difference-makers with the recognition they deserve,” says Jackie Jenkins, VP of Marketing, Built In. “The 2023 winners represent the next generation of leaders who will make an impact on not only their workplaces and communities, but the world as a whole.”

Built In’s Moxie Awards Program was eligible for individual contributors, managers and directors — those with room to grow in their careers — who work in the technology industry. Nominations were accepted for any person who identifies as woman, whether through gender identity, gender expression or sex.
