Home healthcare refers to a range of medical and non-medical services provided to individuals in the comfort of their own homes. It offers personalized and convenient care to those who may have difficulty accessing traditional healthcare facilities or prefer to receive treatment at home. Home healthcare professionals, such as nurses, therapists, and caregivers, deliver a wide array of services, including administering medications, wound care, physical therapy, and assistance with activities of daily living. This approach promotes independence, improves the quality of life, and reduces the need for hospitalization. By bringing medical expertise and support directly to people's homes, home healthcare plays a vital role in meeting the unique needs of patients and enabling them to receive comprehensive care in a familiar and nurturing environment.

Some Key Highlights in the Report

The respiratory equipment segment revenue is expected to register a substantially rapid revenue CAGR during the forecast period. This is due to increasing prevalence of respiratory diseases globally that can be attributed to growth in air pollution and surge in consumption of cigarettes. In addition, a rise in cost of conventional healthcare services has led to growing popularity of home healthcare services.

The hospice & palliative care services segment is expected to register a robust revenue growth rate over the forecast period due to rise in aging population and incidences of life-threatening diseases among aging population.

The North America market is expected to account for largest revenue share over the forecast period. Increasing number of long-term diseases including Parkinson's disease and dementia as well as neurological conditions, such as hypertension, diabetes, and cardiovascular disease, is expected to contribute to revenue growth of the market. In addition, there is a robust presence of major market players, such as Amedisys Inc., Kindred Healthcare, LLC., Medline Industries, Inc., and AccentCare, Inc., in countries in this region.
