solutions across a wide variety of capabilities, today announced the beginning of work on a new collection of philanthropic cases that will redefine charity giving in meaningful and successful ways. A special newsletter will be sent to the company's clients with the content on the subject matter.

Featured investors, who include socialites and entertainers as well as great philanthropists, discuss how they choose charitable organizations, the outcomes they aim to achieve, and the lessons they have learned from operating NGOs.

According to Erik Nilsen, Business Development Manager at Juntoku International: "While immediate name recognition has its advantages, charity organizations confront obstacles on a daily basis, whether or not they have a renowned spokesman. In our work, we advise charities and their funders on how to deal with issues such as fundraising and board development so that their efforts result in effective and purposeful philanthropy."

Juntoku International believes that charities are a vital force in society, working to better the lives of people from all walks of life. Being a charity trustee may be powerful and uplifting in terms of helping to improve society, but it also comes with obligations and, especially when it comes to investments, the need to act in a new field.

That is where Juntoku International comes in - founded to assist charities with asset management, the company is represented by a knowledgeable team that can walk investors through the process and work with them to guarantee their goal is sustained in the long run.
