Some Key Highlights From the Report

The cloud segment accounted for largest revenue share in 2021. Rapid adoption of cloud-based technology, increasing implementation of AI and Internet of Things (IoT) as well rising need for automation with a central system are a few key factors driving revenue growth of this segment. Cloud workforce management enables well-structured collection and merging of company's data onto a single central platform and allows easy access to employees for handling self-service processes, thereby closing gap between departments and saving time.

The large enterprises segment accounted for a significant revenue share in 2021. Cost-effectiveness, reduced risks, and quality issues associated with workforce performance, as well as provision of consistent operations are some of the key factors driving revenue growth of segment. Most workforce-driven industries are facing a shortage of labor along with low employee retention and high rates of turnover, which is increasing demand for workforce management solutions in this segment.

The time and attendance management segment accounted for a significant revenue share in 2021. Rapid adoption of automation tools, reduce labor costs, simplified compliance, easy tracking, and improved organizational efficiency are some of the factors driving revenue growth of segment. Time and attendance software offer an automated and online approach for monitoring and tracking employee's work hours, which will allow insights into areas where productivity is low, thereby helping in identifying the cause of such low productivity.

The telecom and IT segment accounted for a significant revenue share in 2021 owing to having comparatively largest workforce. High demand for process optimization, cost optimization, and productivity is leading telecom businesses to focus on utilization of effective labor based on a skill set, which is one of the key factors driving revenue growth of this segment.

On 12 October 2021, Priority Software Ltd., which is a leading global provider of business management solutions acquired Ovdinnet which is a market-leading Israel-based provider of AttenIX-TS, an advanced cloud-based Time & Attendance software for workforce management. This acquisition is expected to broaden Priority's offering to global enterprise customers in various sectors, such as professional services and retail, as well as companies with complex organizational structures and multi-branch operations. Moreover, it would enable penetration to a new customer base and new markets, which will facilitate growth in both companies, while maintaining product quality and continued high-level support and service.
