It's only human to be concerned for our future. But as leaders like Josh and Ian show us, giving up hope and quitting is not the way. It's possible to do well and do good in this world simultaneously.”

Tina Dietz, CEO Twin Flames Studios

runner in creative thought leadership and producer of podcasts and audiobooks, unveils a compelling episode on their "Drink From the Well" Podcast. Titled "Leading in Uncharted Waters," the episode features pioneering leadership insights from ocean exploration veteran Ian Koblick and Free Water founder Josh Cliffords.

In a world increasingly marked by uncertainties, the podcast delves into how leaders can make a tangible difference in the future of our planet. It explores pressing questions around the coexistence of conservation, activism, and capitalism, and how today's leaders can push boundaries, innovate, and pave the way for positive change.

Ian Koblick has been a leading figure in ocean exploration since the 1960s. Among his notable accomplishments is the creation and operation of “La Chalupa,” the world's most advanced undersea lab. He also co-founded Jules’ Undersea Lodge, the only undersea hotel worldwide. Through the Marine Resources Development Foundation, which he founded and has presided over for 50 years, Koblick has been educating and inspiring over 4,000 students annually.

On the other hand, Josh Cliffords has demonstrated entrepreneurial leadership in unique ways. From his early days running a successful lemonade stand to his current role as the founder of Free Water, Cliffords exemplifies innovation. Free Water, a company that distributes water funded by advertising, saves up to 35 million lives annually.

"Leading in Uncharted Waters" invites leaders to lean into uncertainties, brave the unknown, and transform challenges into opportunities for growth and learning. Koblick and Cliffords embody the transformative power of visionary leadership, providing listeners with an "executive elixir" of inspiration, creativity, and effective communication.

The episode offers invaluable insights for executives, team leaders, and aspiring leaders in various industries looking for fresh strategies to navigate their organizations in an increasingly volatile, uncertain, complex, and ambiguous world.
