

Commerce Community Comes Together to Clean Up the 'Model City'

Members of the business community join City of Commerce mayor to clean the city and care for the environment.

COMMERCE, CALIFORNIA, UNITED STATES, June 20, 2023

/EINPresswire.com/ -- City of Commerce Mayor Hugo Argumedo led a local cleanup on World Environment Day earlier this month. Joining the team were city staff, East LA Sheriff's Station deputies, Bridge Publications, and the owner of a local plant nursery. Food distribution company Guzman Brothers supported the effort with tamales and drinks for the volunteers. And the dumpster they filled was donated by local trash management company Athens Services.

"We all pitched in because we care about this community and the environment. We all want a cleaner and better community," said Bridge Publications public relations director Camila Miranda. She said her team was inspired by The Way to Happiness, a common-sense guide to better living written by author L. Ron Hubbard and published by Bridge Publications. It includes the precept "Safeguard and Improve Your Environment" which states: "There are many things one can do to help take care of the planet. They begin with the idea that one should. They progress with suggesting to others they should."

The team filled a container with brush, trash and abandoned belongings.
