The lyrics paint a vivid picture of the artist's experiences, beginning with his departure from Las Vegas armed with nothing more than a suitcase and his trusty guitar. From washing dishes at a truck stop to facing an unexpected

Ligon's vocals are skillfully accompanied by the masterful instrumentation of seasoned studio musicians, including the electric guitar of Troy Lancaster, acoustic guitar by Mike Waldron, steel guitar by Scotty Sanders, keys by Billy Nobel, bass guitar by Ethan Pilzer, and drums by Wes Little. After tracking with engineer Jim DeBlanc and recording vocals with engineer Rob Lane, the song was expertly mixed by David Buchanan, ensuring a harmonious blend that perfectly supports the lyrical narrative.
