

Black defendant Timothy Wimbush's sentence date approaches in drug conviction tied to Trenton police corruption

NEWARK, NJ, UNITED STATES, July 5, 2023 /EINPresswire.com/ -- The Racial Justice Reform Movement holds protests and rallies, lobbies Congress and state legislatures, educates the public, and takes on individual defendants' cases of extreme racial injustice for free. The case of Timothy L. Wimbush is one such case Case #: 19-134(GC)-Federal District of NJ. While Attorney General Merrick Garland issued a memorandum on December 16, 2022, with recommendations to halt three specified systemic racist laws: Career Offender (3 strikes), Mandatory Minimums, and 924c against nonviolent defendants, Mr. Wimbush's prosecutor has ignored the mandates and applied all three to him anyway. According to General Garland's memorandum, these laws "have resulted in disproportionately severe sentences for certain defendants" ..."and perceived and actual racial disparities in the criminal justice system".

Mr. Wimbush is now facing 30 years to life on his upcoming sentence date of July 18, 2023, at 10am in the Trenton Federal Courthouse for nonviolent possessory charges. To make his case worse, the conviction was achieved even after Trenton police Officer David Ordille was caught lying on the stand, falsifying records, and was suspended for his actions. One goal of the Racial Justice Reform Movement is for urban minorities to receive fair sentences for their crimes, not 30 to life, like what Mr. Wimbush is facing for a minor possessory charge. Mr. Wimbush's "Career Offender" is based on 21 grams of drugs over his whole life. The cycle of over incarcerating Blacks and Latinos for multi-decade sentences propagates a vicious cycle of fatherless children and more poverty and desperation.

His case caught the eye of President Joe Biden, who wrote a letter to Tim on May 8, 2023. President Biden stated "The promise of our Nation has long been underpinned by the values of fairness and justice for all Americans...and to recognize that the promise of equal and impartial justice remains a promise - not a reality - in too many communities and particularly in Black and Brown communities...Our plan includes eliminating racial disparities and ensuring fair sentences."
