Furthermore, LEN has collaborated with Daniel Puder's Non-Profit organization, My Life My Power, to furnish schools with preventative training and programming validated through five published studies in collaboration with the College of William and Mary.

Recent statistics from the National Center for Educational Statistics (NCES) underscore the pressing need for these initiatives. An alarming 20.2% of U.S. students have reported being bullying victims. Moreover, 41% of these victims fear that the bullying will persist. The report also delineates gender discrepancies in bullying patterns, with males subjected to more physical bullying while females face social exclusion and rumor-spreading.

About My Life My Power World Inc: www.mylifemypower.org

My Life My Power (MLMP) is a National 501(c)3 Non-Profit that was founded in 2010 by Undefeated Mixed Martial Arts Fighter and WWE's Tough Enough Champion, Daniel Puder. While Daniel is now a pro athlete, things were quite different for him growing up. He struggled with being overweight and was also in Special Education classes throughout the majority of his schooling, which caused him to be an easy target of bullying. When he began to hear of the kids who were committing suicide from being bullied, he felt a personal connection to the issue and knew that something needed to be done to change the mindset of our youth! Rather than simply saying a few public words about this issue, Daniel was compelled to create a program that provided long-term solutions and could be implemented in schools and after-school programs!

My Life My Power has attracted national and worldwide attention as an innovative, evidence-based program with a highly effective youth diversion and mentoring program. In addition to our youth program, we provide flexible and solution-based pieces of training for adults to become mentors to youth in order to create a significant and purpose-driven society. Trained mentors are then able to facilitate the MLMP program, which is founded upon utilizing positive psychology and motivational interviewing.
