Insulated vinyl siding is a great way to save energy, improve the look of a home and increase its value. It's a cost-effective alternative to other types of siding materials. Vinyl is less expensive than other materials, such as metal or brick, because it doesn't require painting or staining. It also helps keep a house cool in summer by reflecting heat away from home instead of absorbing it as other types of siding do. In winter, insulation properties keep heat inside, so rooms stay warmer longer without extra heating costs!
