Kerry Siggins, CEO of StoneAge, A DotCom Magazine Exclusive Interview

Kerry Siggins and StoneAge are on the cutting edge of "smart" automated industrial cleaning technology used to clean industrial facilities worldwide A great interview!"

ABOUT StoneAge

StoneAge Inc. is the world's leading provider of industrial cleaning tools, automated equipment, technology, and resources. Founded in 1979, StoneAge is headquartered in Durango, Colorado, and proudly serves customers across 35 countries worldwide. Our team is 100% comprised of employee-owners, providing a level of service and dedication rarely seen in today's work environment. It starts with the tools, but ends with our people, our culture, and our values.

StoneAge was born for two reasons: to help solve challenging industrial cleaning problems and create engaging and rewarding jobs for its employees. StoneAge's first product was intended for use in the mining industry – it was a water jet drill used to drill holes for explosives in uranium mining applications. When the Three Mile Accident happened in the late '70s, nuclear power generation halted, and there was no longer a market for the tool.

The founders pivoted when they met an industrial cleaning contractor who said, "If you can drill holes in the rock, you can drill out the fouling in the heat exchanger!" That's how we moved from mining to industrial cleaning. We are now the world's leading manufacturer of waterblasting tooling and automated equipment for industrial cleaning applications. Think high-tech squirt guns on steroids.

We are also a 100% employee-owned
