

Aviation Week Network's MRO Asia-Pacific Returns to Singapore, September 26-28

The conference and exhibition is the region's largest event for the aviation Maintenance, Repair and Overhaul industry

NEW YORK, NY, UNITED STATES, July 11, 2023 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Aviation Week Network's MRO Asia-Pacific (#MROAP) will return to the Singapore Expo and Convention Centre, September 26-28. The conference and exhibition, the region's largest event for the aviation Maintenance, Repair and Overhaul industry, will bring together the most influential members of industry, locally and globally, to discuss the latest issues and concerns of operators and their service providers and suppliers.

Our attendees will connect with innovative leaders, hear new content and ideas, develop new partnerships and contacts, share knowledge, shop solution providers and make business deals.”

*Lydia Janow, Sr. Vice President, Events, Aviation
Week Network*

MRO Asia Pacific will provide expert led content, matched networking, and a marketplace where the airline, OEM, MRO and supplier communities will discover and showcase new products and innovations, connect with and source new and existing business partners, and share knowledge and best practices.

Conference sessions will take place on September 26-27 and will feature expert led content including:

- How will the re-opening of China affect the supply chain and regional aftermarket?
- What are the opportunities in India and is there MRO to support the growth?
- What strategies are being put in place to manage and add resilience to the supply chain?

- How is the region aligning and working together to prevent loss of talent overseas?
- How is inflation and high costs affecting regional players and maintenance strategies?
- Are MROs in the region adopting digital to enhance competitiveness?
- Is there the capacity and MRO slots needed for regional players?

See the agenda here.

The sold-out exhibition hall will be open September 27-28 and will showcase 180 solution providers. The exhibition hall will also include the complimentary Go Live! Theater addressing hot subjects including:

- Understanding the implications if aircraft are more regularly unable to take off in extreme high heat in Southeast Asia and other regions?
- Engaging with challenges of electric
- Navigating regulatory challenges in the region
- Evolving and updating cybersecurity to protect against an ever-changing challenge
- Using digitalization to increase competitiveness
- Assessing AAM in the region: Infrastructure, platforms and challenges

The event is expected to draw 4,000 registered attendees from 60+ countries including hundreds of decision-makers from airlines, lessors and MROs.

"We are thrilled to return to Singapore for the largest industry event in the region," said Lydia Janow, Senior Vice President of Events for Aviation Week Network. "Our attendees will connect with innovative leaders, hear new content and ideas, develop new partnerships and contacts, share knowledge, shop solution providers and make business deals."

The event will start with the MRO Asia-Pacific Awards the evening of Monday, September 25 at Chijmes, Singapore where attendees will recognize and celebrate the extraordinary work of MROs and industry professionals who go above and beyond to make the community soar.

The MRO Asia-Pacific Platinum Sponsor is StandardAero, and Gold Sponsors are AFI KLM E&M, Ameco, Collins Aerospace, Embraer, Lufthansa Technik, OEMS, Pratt & Whitney, SIA Engineering Company, Spirit AeroSystems, and SR Technics. The event is supported by the Singapore Exhibition & Convention Center and the Singapore Tourism Board.

Purposeful Partners are Airlines For America, Airlink, Association for Aerospace Industries (Singapore) IATA, Queensland Government Australia, and Women in Aviation International Singapore Chapter.
