Artees recognizes the importance of individuality and empowerment in design, hence, the tips provided cater to users of all levels of design proficiency:

1. Start with High-Quality Artwork - If you're importing your own artwork, start with high-resolution images. Low-resolution images may look fine on screen, but they can result in a poor print quality. Artees' Design Studio supports various file formats including JPG, PNG, SVG, and PDF for best results.

Ray Patel, owner of Artees

2. Leverage Pre-Designed Logos - If you don't have a design ready or want a quick solution, browse through Artees' vast library of pre-designed logos. From academic to athletic themes, there's something for every school's spiritwear needs.

3. Consider Shirt Colors - Ensure your design stands out against the shirt color. If your design has light colors, it might not show up on a light-colored shirt, and vice versa.

4. Use the Right Fonts - Artees' Design Studio offers a range of fonts to choose from. Opt for fonts that are easily readable and represent your school's character. Keep in mind the font size when considering the legibility.
5. Sizing and Placement - Play around with the sizing and placement of your design. Whether you prefer a large logo at the center or a small one at the corner, Artees' Design Studio allows you to visualize the final look.
6. Take Advantage of the Design Studio's Tools - Use the tools available in the Design Studio, like layering, rotating, and transparency, to add a professional touch to your design.
7. Preview and Save - Take advantage of the preview function to ensure everything looks perfect. You can also save your design and revisit it later if you need more time to finalize.
