winner in the Parenting & Family category with his enlightening book, Help for the Hurting Child. Banta's compassionate exploration of the ways to guide and assist people that are caring for children who are unable to be with their parents struck a chord with readers and judges alike, earning him this prestigious accolade.

In the Travel category, Carl R. Brush captivated readers with his enthralling work, Bonita, and claimed the top honor. Brush's ability to transport readers to enchanting adventures through vivid prose showcases his exceptional talent for weaving page-turning narratives. Bonita is a testament to Brush's remarkable ability to immerse readers in a world brimming with cultural richness and transformative experiences in a journey of self-discovery.

The achievements of Bookside Press authors extend beyond the winners' circle, with several securing coveted finalist positions in their respective categories. Sammy Levitt's thrilling adventure tale, Ben's, captivated readers and secured a place as a finalist in the Adventure category. Rachel G. Carrington's poignant coming-of-age memoir, The Early Years, delved deep into personal experiences, resonating with readers and earning her a spot among the finalists in the Memoir category.

Shirley Howard's inspirational book, Every Day with Jesus: God Loves and Cares for You, also became a finalist in the Spirituality category, offering solace and guidance to those seeking spiritual enlightenment through daily journals. Additionally, George Davis' insightful book, Bipolar Heaven and Hell, emerged as a finalist in the Self-Help category, providing valuable support and understanding to individuals navigating the complexities of mental health.

Bookside Press also extends its heartfelt congratulations to the following winners and finalists:

1. Luisa Mirella Plancher — The Strength of the Nation | Winner, Religious Category
