Inspired by the real Bradykin, who was featured on the Animal Planet's "Too Cute" when he was eight weeks old, Susan and Megan decided to share Bradykin's irresistible charm, and his infectious joy to bring happiness and warmth to the lives of countless people. Sharing his adventures with readers is just another way to bring a smile to children worldwide.

"Megan and I embarked on the beautiful journey of writing, capturing the essence of Bradykin's spirit, and creating a story that would resonate with young hearts," said Susan. "Since that moment, our passion for storytelling has flourished, and we were compelled to continue writing, nurturing the dreams and imaginations of children everywhere."

The writing duo has found purpose in extending their love of storytelling and often support children's programs in hospitals, organizations like Cradles to Crayons and in schools. Witnessing the joy sparked in children's eyes as they immerse themselves in the tales of Bradykin fills Susan's and Megan's hearts with a profound sense of fulfillment. These encounters serve as a reminder that storytelling has the power to uplift spirits, offer hope, and bring a ray of sunshine into even the darkest of moments.

About the Authors:

Susan Downing calls Hanover, Mass., home and has a passion for writing fueled by the inspiration she received from her favorite elementary English teacher, Mrs. Beatrice Barnicle. Dogs and children hold a special place in Susan's heart. Through her books, Susan endeavors to capture the essence of small-town values, family traditions and happy memories. Her aim is to create stories that resonate with readers, while also preserving the everyday moments that shape families and create lasting memories.
