"We are absolutely thrilled our film 'Stolen Dough' is to be screened publicly on Friday, July 21 at The Long Island International Film Expo. This film has been a dream from the start. We were honored to receive the Russo Brothers AGBO Film grant during the initial stages of writing the script. As directors & co-producers, we couldn't be prouder of our team of actors, crew and all our collaborators," said Stefano Da Frè, Director & Screenwriter, and Laura Pellegrini, Executive Producer.

The film's protagonist, Anthony "The Big Cheese" Mongiello (inventor of Stuffed Crust Pizza), shares his excitement, stating, "Being born and raised in Brooklyn, it's an incredible feeling to have a movie about me premiering at Long Island International Film Expo. I hope that people who watch it will be inspired to follow their own dreams, and that it will serve as a reminder of the power of hard work and perseverance."

About Long Island International Film Expo

For 26 years, the Long Island International Film Expo has united filmmakers, producers, actors and actresses — and of course, moviegoers — in the heart of Nassau County, Long Island. Aside from 131 films — both shorts and features — which will be screened during this year's expo, there are also a variety of panels and discussions ticket-buyers can attend. In particular, panels on writing, legalities and liabilities, and a director's point of view on auditions, which are almost always fully booked.
