These travel experiences are tailored to the individual's goals and intentions so they can explore the world around them safely while learning, experiencing, and achieving something new. Create Joy also strives to ensure the travel impact on the Earth is minimal or neutral so that destinations and natives can continue to thrive without the negative impacts of over-tourism.

"When you are the leader of your own journey, seeking out the unfamiliar, manifesting a different kind of life, one that prioritizes having different experiences, it will lead you to personal growth along with a more profound understanding of our world and its many cultures and people," said Heather Morse, founder of Create Joy Travel. "My goal is to help others do just that through travel experiences."
