One of the most delightful reads of the year! This book is a must-read for anyone looking to relive, remember, and reflect on the experiences of the COVID-19 pandemic.”

Scott Dawson, Author

“Everyone did their best during distance learning. For the teachers, it was an impossible task to begin with. For the parents, they promoted the best learning environments they could. For the children, it felt utterly hopeless. The concept of having second graders independently finish their work, was one of the most flawed ideas that came out of the pandemic. Plain and simple, everyone let these youngsters down.”

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Anthony Faust, a dedicated husband, and father, was profoundly affected by the COVID-19 pandemic. Like many others, he faced the challenges of adapting to the new pandemic world after being sent home from work in March 2020. Throughout the pandemic, he and his family experienced both remarkable and trying moments. From heartwarming drive-by birthday celebrations and cherishing quality time with loved ones, to witnessing struggles with distance learning and frustration caused by poorly designed applications for his youngest daughter. He also observed the difficulties his girls faced playing sports in masks and was disheartened by the politicization of COVID-19 and its impact on small businesses. In his debut book, Anthony aims to document his experiences, helping future generations learn from both the positive and negative aspects of the pandemic.
