manufacturer of eco-conscious skincare and sun protection products, is set to appear on the renowned TV show, Boom America. This show spotlights innovative companies with transformative solutions, and Stream2Sea's participation serves as recognition of their unwavering commitment to protecting our aquatic ecosystems.

Stream2Sea's CEO and Cosmetic Chemist, Autumn Blum, stated, "Boom America, Kevin Harrington, and their exceptional team have provided us with invaluable support. Their insights and strategies will assist us in advancing our mission to save our oceans and humanity."

Founded in 2015, Stream2Sea was born from a dive trip that made Blum realize the detrimental impact of everyday products on our aquatic environment. The company now produces the only mineral-based sunscreen on the planet that's been tested and proven safe for freshwater fish, saltwater fish, and coral larvae, boasting the rigorous HEL Labs Protect Land + Sea certification.

Blum, a recognized entrepreneur and life-long ocean advocate, leads the Stream2Sea team from their Florida-based manufacturing facility. Under her guidance, Stream2Sea leads the way in the development of eco-conscious skincare, consistently advocating for a cleaner and safer environment. Blum's influential work has reached as far as the National Academies of Science, the Senate, and beyond, helping to enact bans on toxic ingredients in various global tourist destinations.

All Stream2Sea products are developed with environmental consciousness at their core. They are free from harmful ingredients and enriched with a proprietary antioxidant-rich blend to protect and nourish the skin. Stream2Sea also avoids known endocrine disruptors and harmful chemical ingredients in all of their products.
