What makes Hope For The Warriors such a powerful resource for our heroes and their families is that its leaders understand and believe in the conviction of shared sacrifice. Often, the individuals and family members supported by Hope For The Warriors have sacrificed more than anyone can realize.

The leadership team that operates Hope For The Warriors is comprised of combat veterans and military family members who truly understand the challenges and sacrifices made by their colleagues in arms. It is an organization built on integrity, honor, and commitment. Besides transition programs and resources, Hope for the Warriors offers a variety of support in health and wellness along with sports and recreation programs.

"It is an honor to be a NVBDC Military and Veteran Organization task force member," shared Robin Kelleher, co-founder, and CEO of Hope For The Warriors. "Connecting with like-minded organizations allows us to grow our mission of restoring stability, strength, and community for military families."

The Steven A. Cohen Military Family Clinic at Hope For The Warriors is another service provided by Hope For The Warriors. It offers confidential, highly rated behavioral health care services at little to no cost without long wait times to a variety of veterans from post-9/11 to other active-duty service members. The clinic serves as a local resource for communities in the Southeastern U.S. including Camp Lejeune, Jacksonville, and other areas.

The not-for-profit organization accepts contributions to provide direct support for service members. In-person and remote volunteer opportunities are available throughout the U.S.

"The breadth and depth of services that Hope for the Warriors provides is extremely impressive," says U.S. Army Lt. Col. (retired) Kathy Poynton, Military & Veteran Organization Task Force Director. "The impact they have on veterans, service members, and families can't be measured."
