“

Jesus said: “Don’t be afraid”, “follow Me!” He was talking about a society where all people are equal – no one is superior or inferior.”

Global Crisis. Who Is Jesus Christ to Us?

The conference delved into the challenges facing humanity today, where one in three people considers themselves followers of Christ. The speakers explored the apparent paradox of professing love for Jesus and following His commandments while witnessing a world plagued by wars, violence, hunger, and a devaluation of human life. Against the backdrop of escalating global climate catastrophes, participants sought to find solutions and introspect on humanity's role in creating a better world.

The event's agenda covered a wide array of topics, providing in-depth insights into historical perspectives, spiritual values, and modern interpretations related to Jesus Christ. Attendees were taken on a thought-provoking journey, featuring discussions on climate change, the significance of the crucifixion, distortions of Christ's teachings, the creation of religions, and the role of influential organizations like the Vatican.

The conference also examined the Creative Society and how this visionary concept aligns with Jesus Christ's teachings. Topics such as freedom of choice, responsibility, and the potential for a Golden Age underpinned the hope for a positive transformation in society.

Key segments of the conference included the revelation of historical truths about the trials and tribulations Jesus Christ faced during his time, as well as critical insights into the modern-day challenges in adhering to His teachings. The conference emphasized the need for unity and collaboration among individuals and communities to create a more compassionate and empathetic world.
