of Dojo Five*

of embedded firmware products and services, is proud to announce the launch of its brand-new website, www.dojofive.com. The site is focused on providing customers with the information they need to make informed decisions about their embedded firmware development needs. The word “dojo” means “a place of learning” and the new site features comprehensive resources that cover all aspects of modern embedded firmware development—from the basics to more advanced topics.

Designed with executives, experienced developers, project managers and newcomers in mind, the new website provides access to helpful resources such as infographics, webinars, videos, sample code snippets and more. In addition, the blog section offers visitors insight and guidance into the latest trends in modern embedded firmware development as well as industry news and updates from Dojo Five.

“We’re so excited to launch an educational website that will help our customers understand how our solutions can modernize their embedded firmware development systems,” said Joe Schneider, CEO and Founder of Dojo Five. “Our goal was to create a website that would be both informative and accessible for our customers, as well equip our clients and the developer community with tools and information that helps them to accelerate, revolutionize, and modernize their development processes. We want to empower them to deliver successful projects that delight their customers through the resources and information available on the new site.”

Through the website, visitors can easily contact Dojo Five's team of experts for questions or concerns they may have regarding their projects, or the products and services offered by Dojo Five. The website is dedicated to educating customers about embedded firmware, and provides a centralized hub for modern tools and resources.

"We are thrilled with this new website launch," said Tom Dever, Dojo Five's Vice President of Product. "We want site visitors to have the best possible experience when they come to us for their embedded firmware needs. We've put a lot of effort into building a comprehensive source of information about how to modernize your embedded firmware development, as well as learn about our products and services should you need help. This website allows us to do just that."

Dojo Five is passionate about revolutionizing the embedded firmware development industry and is confident the new website will help them educate customers about how embedded firmware works, and how it can be used to create better products. The site will be a great resource for anyone looking for more information on Dojo Five's products and services, or interested in learning more about embedded firmware development in general. The company looks forward to continuing its mission of transforming the way companies develop software by providing valuable resources through its website and other channels.
