Ketoanalogues are a type of dietary supplement that is used to treat chronic kidney disease (CKD). They work by providing the body with essential amino acids without the production of harmful nitrogenous waste products. This can help to slow the progression of CKD and improve the quality of life for patients. The global ketoanalogue for kidney disease market is estimated to reach CAGR of 6.5% from 2023-2031

The ketoanalogue for kidney disease market growth was declined due to a reduction in non-urgent medical visits, including those for chronic conditions like kidney disease. However, the ketoanalogue for kidney disease market continues to grow in the post-pandemic period, as the number of people with kidney disease increases. Additionally, the development of new ketoanalogue products and the increasing use of ketoanalogues in combination with other treatments are expected to drive market growth.
