Earning a place on the Inc. 5000 for the second year in a row isn't just about growth numbers; it's a testament to our relentless pursuit of solutions where others see barriers.”

Brian Geisel, CEO, Geisel Software

"Our team doesn't just develop software; we tackle some of the industry's most complex technical challenges, especially in the realms of robotics, AI/ML, and IoT," asserted Brian Geisel, CEO of Geisel Software. "Earning a place on the Inc. 5000 for the second year in a row isn't just about growth numbers; it's a testament to our relentless pursuit of solutions where others see barriers."

The Inc. 5000 class of 2023 represents companies that have driven rapid revenue growth while navigating inflationary pressure, the rising costs of capital, and seemingly intractable hiring challenges. The Inc. 5000 recognition puts Geisel Software in the top 47% of all privately-owned companies in America in terms of multi-year growth.

“Running a business has only gotten harder since the end of the pandemic,” says Inc. editor in-chief Scott Omelianuk. “To make the Inc. 5000 — with the fast growth that requires — is truly an accomplishment. Inc. is thrilled to honor the companies that are building our future.”
