“Within families, open communication is so important,” says Dr. Betsy Kanarowski, “Being proactive as a parent in having important conversations ensures that your children will feel safe coming to you with questions or concerns. And those conversations help protect against the risk of child sexual abuse.”

The reality is that 80% of children who are sexually abused are abused by someone they know. The key to reducing the risk of child sexual abuse is taking an active role in your child’s life and having frequent, open conversations to reduce their vulnerability and build their confidence.

Saprea’s focus is on liberating individuals and society from child sexual abuse and its lasting impacts. The campaign supports that initiative by providing parents and caregivers with day-to-day tools to have conversations that will help reduce the risk of child sexual abuse.
