ETQ, part of Hexagon, and Trogen, a digital transformation consultancy, today announced a strategic reseller partnership through which Trogen will immediately begin selling the industry-leading ETQ Reliance quality management system (QMS) to new customers across India.

"As ETQ continues to scale to bring the quality management and health and safety benefits of ETQ Reliance to a growing base of customers, we're committed to expanding our footprint across the globe," said Vick Vaishnavi, CEO, ETQ. "With its deep understanding of SaaS, quality management, low code and analytics, we're confident that Trogen is the right partner to help companies in India join the roster of happy ETQ Reliance customers that are accelerating the pace of new product introductions, realizing greater supplier visibility and control, mitigating risk and making smarter business decisions across the organization."

"At Trogen, our core belief is that technology should be a catalyst for revolutionizing work methodologies, fostering awareness, empowerment, and connectivity in every interaction and relationship we engage with," stated Ragin Earatte, COO and co-founder of Trogen. "Aligned seamlessly with our mission, the remarkable capabilities of ETQ Reliance hold the potential to elevate enterprise-wide quality management to unprecedented heights. We are elated to embark on this journey alongside our clientele, enabling them to unlock the myriad advantages this synergy presents."

Automating and streamlining quality practices with a comprehensive QMS solution helps companies improve product and service quality, while minimizing the cost of poor quality and reducing risk caused by product failures, recalls, non-compliance or a host of other issues. ETQ Reliance is available with over 40 ready-to-use applications for key quality functions, such as document control, audit management, environmental health and safety, nonconformance management, supplier quality management, training management and others.
