We love short films. Shorts can pack an emotional punch and take us on a wonderful ride in 40 minutes or less.”

*Co-Founder of Rock the Shorts
Roxanne Marciniak*

Now in its fourth year, the founders of Rock the Shorts, Roxanne Marciniak and Josef Csongei, are huge fans of short films. The festival showcases short films while recognizing that many actors, directors, and writers have launched careers from this medium. “We feel the creators of such entertainment deserve recognition and encouragement, said Co-Founder/Festival Director Roxanne Marciniak. All of the filmmakers should feel like

Rock Stars at our film festival. They all deserve it. There is so much talent out there. This year we have films from Emmy-winning and nominated professionals. We will be screening "His, Ours, A" written and directed by Nate Hapke who has won four Emmys for Directing ABC's "General Hospital." We will also premiere "Shatter the Glass" directed by Patrick Hogan who has received eight Emmy nominations in Sound Editing for "Six Feet Under," "Family Guy" and Netflix hits "Cobra Kai" and "Umbrella Academy." We would also like to highlight "The Wrong Guy" directed performing arts, is one of the few remaining mid-sized and fully equipped proscenium venues in Los Angeles. It features orchestra, mezzanine, loge, and balcony seating, and is known for its excellent sight-lines and acoustics. The Ricardo Montalbán Foundation, a 501(c)(3) nonprofit, bought the building in 1999. Humanitarian and Emmy Award-winning actor Ricardo Montalbán's vision was to create a presence in Hollywood that provided inspiration and employment for young Latinos, as well as other underrepresented people throughout the community.
