The two companies are combining forces to partner and pursue Test Stand opportunities leveraging strengths from each organization. DTB is a respected U.S. testing facility and producer of technical manual documentation; Bauer designs and manufactures component test stands. DTB and Bauer share similar clients within the Aerospace &

Defense market with a network of services to support OEMs as well as Tier 1/2 suppliers. The MoU enables the companies to build stronger relationships with their clients by integrating and leveraging core competencies.

“This agreement formalizes and strengthens the existing relationship between Bauer and DTB,” said Ivette Cálix Damish, Vice President, Business Development at DTB. “I look forward to continuing to build on our constructive cooperative agreement in the interest of providing our customers with the breadth and depth of expertise expected in the design, build, test, and the documentation requirements of Test Stands, while enhancing both of our businesses.”

“We are excited to take this important step with DTB, which provides an opportunity to leverage the resources, strengths and talent of both companies,” commented Cliff Stone, Vice President, Business Development at Bauer. “There is a need in the aircraft sector for industry leading component test equipment and by working with DTB, we are reinforcing our companies’ shared commitment to support this critical sector,” he continued.
