Changed's latest feature incorporates an automated credit card debt paydown solution for all debt holders, offering a platform that simplifies managing credit card debt and a range of financial commitments – from student loans to mortgages, auto loans, personal loans, and credit score tracking. With the click of a button, the user-friendly and engaging interface empowers members with a tool to automate accelerated credit card payoff. The outcome is a faster and more impactful reduction in debt, that has helped their members save thousands of dollars in interest and save years off of their debt.

"We've always understood the struggle with debt firsthand," said Nick Sky, CEO and co-founder, alongside Dan Stelmach. "That's what led us to start Changed – to provide solutions that tackle these problems head-on and give control back to people. Adding the credit card debt payoff option has our members excited. It's about helping them take charge of their finances, with easy tools and automation that fit their own journey to becoming debt-free. Because no journey is the same – some might choose to snowball their debt, while others might opt to avalanche their debt. Changed makes these strategies more effective and easier to implement, all with a simple click of a button in one easy-to-use platform."

Recognized as a top player in fintech for debt solutions, Changed has consistently helped people repay debts up to 31% faster than going it alone, potentially saving them thousands in interest. With these new features, Changed aims to make financial freedom more easily achievable, understanding that people are busy. The set-it-and-forget-it approach simplifies the process, allowing individuals to focus on their lives while their debts are managed smartly.
