Mentorship and Volunteering: Building Bridges to Success

Without a direct partnership with the body of Christ, the program's potential for success is limited. Brand 316 urgently needs the prayers and time commitment of Christians who believe in the power of transformation. Volunteers play a pivotal role in their efforts, and mentoring is an exceptional opportunity to make a difference. They are in constant need of mentors who can dedicate just one hour a week for six weeks. This commitment goes a long way in providing guidance, support, and the chance for someone recently released to forge a new path.

Creating a Support Network for Lasting Change

The value of a strong support network upon release is immeasurable. This is where the church and its members come in. No matter someone's profession, they can contribute. Financial planners, counselors, retirees – there's a role for everyone. Financial planners can teach courses on basic financial management. Counselors can provide much-needed support for those overcoming trauma. The skills and life experience of retirees can truly impact lives in a profound way.

Small and Large Business Partnerships: Empowering the Future

Businesses and business owners have a significant role to play in the mission of Brand 316. Graduates from the program are equipped to be valuable assets to companies. Studies show that formerly incarcerated individuals are often more loyal, hardworking, and grateful employees. They actively invite businesses to consider hiring their graduates and become part of their transformation journey. Their commitment to work during the program training reflects their dedication to long-term career growth and they have proven to be wonderful employees.

Vital Immediate Needs: Housing, Transportation, and Donations

Stable housing and transportation are pivotal in successful reintegration for the recently released. The ministry seeks partnerships with halfway houses to provide safe housing for their
