Their most listened-to episode "Murder House" boasts a remarkable 2,000 listens, and they currently have over 45,000 downloads from across 55 countries.

Hosted by two passionate and seasoned true crime enthusiasts, as well as childhood friends, Whitney Rivera and Camden Schacher bring a fresh perspective to the true crime podcast realm. The podcast's appeal lies not only in its engaging content but also in the hosts' familiarity with Idaho and their intimate knowledge of the cases they cover.

Reflecting on their journey, podcast host Whitney Rivera shares, "We were both pretty shocked about how much information and how many stories are out there and the wild things that happened in Idaho. We were aware of some of the things going on, but we didn't really know the full story. It has been really eye-opening when we go in and research a story to find out what really happened."

One of the most notable aspects of Ghosts and Garnets is its commitment to offering a unique slate of cases that haven't saturated the true crime market. The podcast has curated a lineup of captivating episodes. Some of the top episodes include investigative deep dives into the "Bryan Kohburger: The Probable Cause Affidavit," the infamous "Ruby Ridge" incident, the "Ceaseless Dumbfuckery: The Brothers Lankford," and the chilling account of "Conquering Moscow: The Mother Kirk Cult."

Fresh content and stellar hosts! True crime podcasts these days are getting stale. I had high hopes for this one and it has far exceeded my expectations."

A Devoted Listener

One devoted listener raves about the show, "Fresh content and stellar hosts! True crime podcasts these days are getting stale. I had high hopes for this one and it has far exceeded my expectations. guarantee you'll be hooked!"
