Regularly analyzing team performance is critical to growth and success. However, traditional performance evaluations are often inefficient, subjective, and inaccurate. Intelogos changes this by offering an artificial intelligence-based system that gives businesses an objective, data-driven picture of performance in real time.

We built Intelogos to provide teams with a performance management solution based on facts and data, not opinions and assumptions.”

Vasily Malyshev, CEO of Intelogos

Intelogos platform uses its own desktop app and integrates seamlessly with existing business tools, messengers, and project management software to provide insights into how employees are collaborating and working. Advanced machine learning algorithms analyze millions of data points to identify patterns indicative of high efficiency and productivity. The platform then provides personalized AI recommendations to improve employee, team, and company performance.

Intelogos empowers employees with data and suggestions they need to grow their careers.

Employees get the opportunity to study their individual data rather than waiting for subjective annual reviews. It helps them understand what they need to do to improve and get a promotion. It can even help them understand how to minimize distractions at work and improve their engagement, making their work a more calm and pleasant experience.
