"We fight for employees whose wages have not been properly paid by their employers," said Michael Akopyan, founder and spokesperson for the Akopyan Law Firm A.P.C. "In California, wages get special treatment under the law because of the economic position of the average worker and their dependence on wages."

"Wages are not ordinary debts of the employer like rent, insurance, or utilities," said Akopyan and added, "California law favors full and prompt payment of wages due to employees."

"If your wages have not been paid by your employer and you need to speak with an unpaid wage lawyer in Los Angeles County, the Akopyan Law Firm, A.P.C., may be able to help," said Akopyan. "Our unpaid wage attorneys have substantial experience representing employees in unpaid wage cases and can help you secure the wages that you have earned."
