Thanks to the continued generosity of The Union Bank Co. we can educate more kids about how to avoid exploitation that leads to human trafficking”

*Courtney Schmackers,
Executive Director of She Has A Name*

She Has A Name, a local Columbus nonprofit, provides support to those impacted by human trafficking. The nonprofit offers educational programming that equips people with the understanding of what human trafficking is and why it happens, additionally, it helps people care for those affected and gets them involved in the movement. She Has A Name puts people affected by human trafficking first and believes that the value of human life is what is most important.

This August, The Union Bank Co. donated $3000 in support of the efforts of She Has A Name. This donation funds the educational programming and survivor resources provided by She Has A Name, and in turn, supports the city of Columbus and surrounding areas.

“Thanks to the continued generosity of The Union Bank Co. we can educate more kids about how to avoid exploitation that leads to human trafficking,” Courtney Schmackers, Executive Director of She Has A Name said. “We are grateful for this partnership that enables us to realize our vision to care for all those impacted, Schmackers continued.”
