Weam Namou

Author and filmmaker Weam Namou was born in Baghdad, Iraq to an indigenous lineage called the Chaldeans. Two of her books have been made into films, one a feature documentary and the second, Pomegranate, a fascinating feature film.

Description:

In 2009, Dawn Hanna was sentenced to six years in federal prison, accused of conspiring to broker telecom equipment to Iraq during the sanctions. After her sentencing, two men risked their lives to tell the truth. Unbeknownst to Dawn and the jury, her co-conspirator was a CIA operative. The project was sponsored by the U.S. to listen in on Saddam Hussein and his men.
