and discipleship.

A foundational tenet of the Christian Faith is to grow, sharing the gospel to all with ears to hear. But successful ministry can eventually lead to a lack of space. Church construction is an expensive process that requires a great deal of planning and preparation to ensure that it is completed in an efficient and cost effective manner. Time is valuable for church leadership teams, and finding a solution that allows them to serve their congregation while enhancing the church can be both time-consuming and overwhelming.

Building On Purpose experts offer a solution for achieving a final outcome that meets the church's needs and goals. The event on November 9th will provide an abundance of information including the best practices to stay on budget during remodel, as well as how to achieve fundraising goals.

Available space for worship, congregational fellowship, and teaching is a determining factor in a visitor's willingness to become a regular member. According to Lifeway Research, nearly three in four pastors said building additional ministry space on site has led to growth. "Many churches who do not take steps to expand are struggling," commented Scott McConnell, associate director of LifeWay Research.

The experts at Lifeway advise that it is crucial that a congregation has enough space for gathering in the lobby and enough room for all of the kids in the children's ministry. If these areas are becoming overcrowded, that could hinder the growth of a congregation.

The Building On Purpose team of architects, builders and fundraisers can help you design, fund, and build space on schedule and budget, addressing space that doesn't fit your needs, or that leaves church attendees feeling cramped and unwelcome in your building.

Registrants can learn about current best church design practices at Alexandria Presbyterian Church. With their new building facilities, the Alexandria Presbyterian Church has inspiring, functional worship space; engaging space for vibrant children and youth ministries, and welcoming space for gathering and fellowship. Many of the ideas incorporated are applicable to other churches.

Please join Building On Purpose on Thursday, November 9th at 9 a.m EST at Alexandria Presbyterian Church, 1300 West Braddock Road, and discover the steps to make your vision a reality.
