"Opera has been popular for 425 years, but in recent years it's been perceived as music for the elite. It is not. It is as relevant to audiences today as ever, and we want to help a wider and younger audience see that and fall in love with it as so many others have," Casellati says.

The theme of this year's concert is 'Peace on Earth: the Art of Nature.' The event will be opened by star tenor Michael Fabiano singing Verdi's Hymn of Nations written for the International Exhibition of 1862 in London. It will also feature a composition by 11-year-old Isaac Thomas. His piece, All Around Earth, was selected by Maestro Casellati as the winning performance piece. "Our program highlights how our best composers celebrate nature through their music. That includes an incredible composition by Juilliard student Isaac Thomas, a talent well beyond his years," Casellati says.

Isaac Thomas, a student at The Juilliard School of Music in Manhattan, is making his first trip to DC to be part of the Opera Italiana is in the Air performance. "I'm really excited to have my piece performed at the Lincoln Memorial. It's quite an honor," he says.

BACKGROUND:

Alvise Casellati is the Founder and Music Director of Opera Italiana is in the Air, an organization he created in 2017, six years after leaving a career as an attorney to follow his dream of connecting new and diverse audiences to bring Italian opera back to where it belongs: pop music. Today, he lives out his "dream," making the beauty of Italian opera known, accessible, and enjoyable to everyone. Since his debut in Italy at the Venice Opera House in 2011, he's worked with hundreds of artists, dozens of theaters, orchestras, and music festivals worldwide. Praised as an artist with a very forward-looking vision of classical music, Alvise has walked to the boundaries of music by bringing projects where music is utilized as a life-saving method (collaborating with the Music Therapy department at the Memorial Sloan Kettering Cancer Hospital) or to projects in Italy where the Italian language in opera is used to help the integration of immigrants. Alvise is also the Founder and President of the Venetian Community of New York, and has served as Managing Director of the Foundation for Italian Art and Culture in New York.
