

Centivo Gives a Roadmap to Unlocking Healthcare Affordability

Centivo released a comprehensive roadmap for employers on how to reduce healthcare costs.

BUFFALO, N.Y., UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, September 7, 2023 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Employers have always played a crucial role in the U.S. healthcare system. But their role comes with great responsibility and an opportunity for significant improvement.

Transforming the complex healthcare system may seem challenging, but employers don't have to tackle it alone. By partnering with health plans that prioritize value-based care, employers can enhance quality and reduce costs.

Together, they can create a primary care-centric network that delivers exceptional care to employees, while also ensuring their company's financial stability and long-term success. Additionally, it's important to prioritize working with healthcare innovators who are dedicated to providing industry insights, technological resources and strong provider relationships.

In this recently released report (found here), Centivo explains why current healthcare plans are falling short, including increasing costs without correlation to quality, stagnation in the evolution of healthcare plans and lack of aligned incentives for primary care physicians and other providers just to name a few. Not only does Centivo explain current shortcomings with many healthcare plan providers, but they also explain how Centivo is creating care models that truly work.

Centivo supports employers through an effective healthcare model that includes utilizing primary centric-care, full transparency and greater accessibility. Challenging the complex healthcare system can sound daunting, but employers hold the power to affect meaningful change. Want to explore opportunities to drive better health outcomes and greater affordability? Check out the report today!
