Joseph Verdirame, CEO of Alliance Homecare

Parkinson's disease is a brain disorder that causes uncontrollable or unintended movements like shaking or stiffness and trouble with balance and coordination. Experts estimate one million people in the U.S. may have the progressive disease.

The Parkinson's Foundation Community Partner training focuses on best-practice care and provides the latest information and access to educational tools so caregivers can stay up to date on the rapid advances in research, treatments and understanding of the disease. “We appreciate all Alliance Homecare is doing to educate their staff to improve care for those living with PD,” said Joan Gardner, RN, national co-director of the Community Partners in Parkinson's Care program.

“Our commitment to specialized care tailored to those living with Parkinson's is unwavering,” said Joseph Verdirame, CEO of Alliance Homecare. “This additional education empowers us to better support our clients and their families, ensuring the best possible care for their unique needs. We believe this achievement will have a profound impact on the lives of those we serve.”

The partnership with the Parkinson’s Foundation is yet another addition to the unique combination of complimentary services Alliance Homecare offers to clients and their families. “We are constantly searching for ways to elevate the level of care we provide and to make life better for the people we have the privilege of serving,” said Verdirame.

About Parkinson's Disease

Affecting an estimated one million Americans, Parkinson's disease is the second-most common neurodegenerative disease after Alzheimer's and is the 14th-leading cause of death in the U.S. It is associated with a progressive loss of motor control (e.g., shaking or tremor at rest and lack of facial expression), as well as non-motor symptoms (e.g., depression and anxiety). There is no cure for Parkinson's, and nearly 90,000 new cases are diagnosed each year in the U.S.
